

Lecture programme on Gender discrimination and our society on the occasion of Freshmen Social.

A guest lecture has been organized by the Department of Anthropology on 20th November, 2021. Ms. Arpana Bora, a noted activist graced the lecture programme as the resource person and delivered her talk on “Gender discrimination and our Society”. The talk has been merged with the Freshmen Social programme of the department, 2021. Around 70 students from the Department of Anthropology attended the programme. The students were greatly benefitted from the talk on discrimination of gender. The resource person portrayed some real pictures of our society through her talk and scientific analysis of superstitions which helped the students to grasp the topic under discussion. The resource person emphasized upon the need and importance of educating the younger generation about the concepts of gender-based differences. After the lecture programme the new member students of the Anthropology Department are welcomed by speeches, dances and songs etc.
